ANNUAL REPORT

BUILDING HOPE

CORE VALUES

A FOUNDATION OF HOPE

Carly Colgan

CEO Bend-Redmond Habitat for Humanity

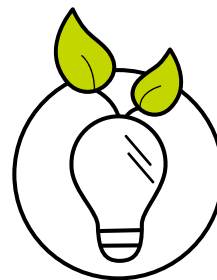

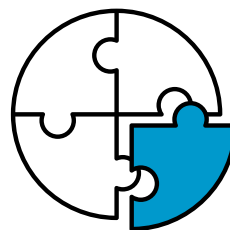

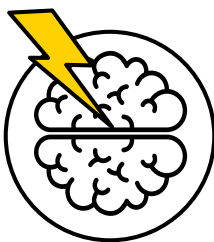

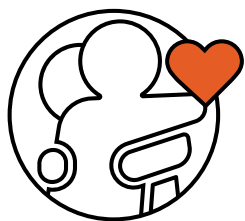

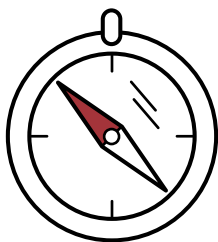

Hope is not built in a single day. It rises, piece by piece, like the walls of a home, like the bonds of a community.

At Bend-Redmond Habitat for Humanity, building hope is more than what we do, it is who we are. Each home we construct carries with it a promise: that tomorrow can be stronger, safer, and filled with possibility.

This past year, that promise came alive in milestones that advanced our vision of 500 housing solutions in 10 years. We celebrated the completion of the net zero Cedar Townhomes, providing families with both stability and sustainability for generations to come. We also finished the universally designed, net zero Wilson home, a middle-income pilot that expands affordability while embracing accessibility and environmental stewardship.

And yet, our work is far from finished. The need is great, but so is our resolve. Together, we will continue building hope, crafting communities where every person has the opportunity to thrive. Join us as we look forward with courage and conviction to build a brighter future together.

Bend-Redmond Habitat for Humanity CORE VALUES

Integrity

Compassion

Empowerment

Belonging

Sustainability

At Bend-Redmond Habitat for Humanity, our work is grounded in five core values: Integrity, Compassion, Empowerment, Belonging, and Sustainability.

These values are the foundation for every decision we make and every action we take, shaping not only the homes we build but the way we serve our community.

Building hope is both vision and pathway. Guided by Hope Theory, we know that when families can see a future of stability and opportunity, and find a clear way to reach it, hope becomes more than a feeling. It becomes momentum.

These values are why we build.

Not only homes, but communities where hope is alive, shared, and enduring.

HOMEOWNER HIGHLIGHT
RAMON & SUZY DIAZ

HAVING OUR OWN HOME MEANS EVERYTHING...

For more than two decades, Ramon and Azucena (Suzy) have called Bend home. It's where they built a life together, raised their children, and held onto one dream through all the ups and downs: owning a home of their own.

In May, that dream became a reality.

After 15 years of renting and years of imagining what a permanent home could mean for their family, Ramon and Suzy completed the Habitat homeownership program and purchased their home—turning the key on a new chapter filled with stability, hope, and opportunity.

Their journey wasn't easy. Like many hardworking families in Central Oregon, they were priced out of the traditional housing market, with the biggest barrier being the upfront cost of a down payment. But inspired by Ramon's two sisters, both Habitat homeowners, they decided to take a leap of faith and apply.

Now, just months after moving in, the difference is already tangible.

Inside their home, joy takes center stage. Ramon, known for filling rooms with song, often serenades the family as Suzy, a natural creative, brings warmth to every corner through her love of painting, crafting, and decorating. Their daughter has a growing talent for making piñatas, while their son thrives on skateboarding and video games. With rooms of their own, both kids have embraced their space—and their independence—with open arms.

"Having our own home means everything," Suzy reflects. "The kids feel proud. We feel proud. We've built something lasting."

Evenings are now spent enjoying movie nights, caring for their pet bunny Jerry, and dreaming up house projects they once couldn't have imagined in a rental. But beyond the daily joys, this home represents something deeper: the power of partnership, perseverance, and community.

Thanks to the community support of donors, volunteers, and advocates, the Diaz family is no longer just imagining a better future. They're living it.

CONSTRUCTION
BUILDING HOPE

10 Homes Completed

Wilson Ave.

This first-of-its-kind home in Bend combines net zero construction and Universal Design to create a model for sustainable, affordable, and accessible homeownership. Serving middle-income families earning 80–120% of area median income, the project was made possible through innovative funding partnerships, including the City of Bend, Hiatus Homes, and the Bend Chamber of Commerce.

Cedar Townhomes

Sustainable Renovation Through Resales

We also revitalized two Habitat homes, renovating and reselling them to new families who partnered with us. These efforts extend the lifecycle of existing homes and reinforce our commitment to sustainability.

Cedar Townhomes, Wickiup Townhomes and Wilson Ave. are all net zero, which prevented about 31.5 metric tons of CO² emissions, equivalent to driving 78,000 fewer miles or planting 520 trees. These systems reduce monthly utility costs and contribute to carbon offset goals, helping homeowners and the planet alike.

Leveraging Habitat for Humanity International funding, we expanded our Homeownership Department with a Loan Origination Specialist, helping more hardworking local families successfully navigate the path to homeownership.

This home means everything to my family.

It's a place where we can build lasting memories and enjoy stability without the constant worry of rising rental rates. Having our own space provides a sense of security and allows us to put down roots in the community."

WOMEN BUILD WEEK
BUILDING HOPE

STRONG WOMEN. STRONG COMMUNITIES.

Women Build Week is more than a build event – it's a movement.

This initiative empowers women and allies to take action in addressing the critical need for stable, attainable homeownership in Central Oregon. Women Build celebrates the vital role women play in building strong communities while providing hands-on opportunities to learn, lead, and make a lasting impact.

Women face unique challenges in achieving homeownership, from wage disparities to higher mortgage denial rates. By coming together, we can break down these barriers, invest in the future of local families, and create a ripple effect of positive change.
